MADE IN EINDHOVEN / THE NETHERLANDS

HAND FOLDED LAMP Our hand folded lamps were first developed for the Bakkerswinkel in Rotterdam. This is the tenth Bakkerswinkel we have furnished and so, despite limited resources and the fact that the world still seems to be immersed in a feeling of crisis, we wanted to create a jubilee design: one that was better, more beautiful, more luxurious and, in particular, more enjoyable than ever for guests. Our collection of punched and hand-folded lamps were inspired by an old, but new to us, punching machine which we accidentally bought along with a large collection of tools intended for the punching machine we already had. We gained not only the most beautiful punch designs but also a machine into the bargain. Having said that it turned out that the machine did not work and the repair work required was not exactly cheap. However, the whole exercise resulted in a renewed interest in punching.

A punching machine is a somewhat old-fashioned piece of equipment in comparison to a laser-cutting machine or a water jet machine. In fact, through the advent of these modern machines, the punching machine has lost favour because it punches the shape of the chosen design in the sheet rather than following a pattern which has been drawn. Attaching the tools is a labour intensive process and the fact that you have to punch holes rather than draw lines means that there are considerable limitations. However, the punching process itself is controlled by a computer. In fact if you want a hole or a particular shape and your punch tool can make that exact shape, nothing is more efficient than a punching machine. Boom, you have a hole. Boom, boom, you have a slit. So why not design according to the possibilities that the machine and its tools offer? The old technique at its best, unrivalled by the modern competition. And so the old machine and its tools offered us the solution we needed to develop, cost-efficiently, a series of lamps especially for the Bakkerswinkel.

ONE MOLD CEREMIC LAMP Last year we introduced the one mold lamp. The concept is simple: one lamp from one mold with different functions. Standing next to your bed or in the cupboard, hanging on the wall as down or up-lighter, but also on a stick as desk lamp or as reading lamp next to the sofa. The one mold lamps in their naked form have now been produced in various glazes.

CRISIS The Crisis collection owes its name to the first crisis we experienced as an established company and which lasted from 2001 until 2002. It turned out to be an insignificant one and, like many others, we weren't affected. So we then went and bought a computer-operated milling cutter. The first products we made with this machine were the Crisis furniture range. The initial concept was to deliver them as flat pack, and thus cheaper, furniture. Yet crisis or not, the customer wasn't interested in DIY furniture. For example, whenever we sold a chair in a bag, parts were often missing. However, the assembled versions did become a success.

Every time the word crisis appeared in the newspapers, we sold more, and so over the years we expanded the series. In 2014 we developed an entirely new range of Crisis furniture consisting of small tables and stools and a large modular table we left at home because of its size.

HAND FOLDED LAMP 4 / 5 / 6 The primary trigger for this series of lamps was the failed Champagne Lamp which was to hang above the bar of the Bakkerswinkel. We had wanted to silver-plate Ruinart champagne bottles after removing the bottom of the bottles but it proved virtually impossible to separate the bottle from the bottom and so we needed an alternative. We thought it would be nice to have copper lamps hanging above the copper bar and the perky shape of the body of the Ruinart bottle formed the basis for the shape of the lamp. In the final analysis model 4 turned out to be the most beautiful of the hand-folded lamps that we had made at that point. Due to the perforations and the way in which the various sides do not quite fully join up, there is something about the way the light escapes through the tiny holes and chinks. Following the example of this one lamp we immediately made two more so that they can be used interchangeably. This also expands the options for interior applications considerably. The lamps are available in 3 materials: brass, copper and steel. The colour of the lead can be modified if desired.

WAXINE OLD LAMP TABLE LIGHT After discovering in April that the old lamp shades and lights sell so well, we purchased an enormous number of old shades. We are now showing the lion's share of these. Sometimes there is just one, sometimes a few and every now and then dozens. It is, for us, a large number of unique products.

WASTE TILE CUBE CABINET The cube scrap wood tile cupboards are made from tiles as we presented them last April during the Salone in Milan. This time, however, the tiles are square and so are the cupboards. The cubes with three drawers or one drawer can be placed alongside or on top of each other. The hidden handle, which we introduced for the enormous beam cabinets, remains virtually untraceable through the grout of the tiles.

OAK DISPLAY AND PHILIPS CABINET In 1993, inspired by a large consignment of square glass plates, we constructed the Oak Display Case. Shelves, sides, top and front were all made in identical fashion with glass plates of the same size. Later, the dimensions of the case were adjusted to match those of the 'Philipskast' and a polycarbonate version was also made. However, we never succeeded in making a steel version. The structure, with its horizontal and vertical parts, turned out to be too complicated to construct out of steel.

CLASSIC CUPBOARD IN SCRAPWOOD The Classic Cupboard was Piet Hein Eek's first piece exploring scrapwood material, and is meticulously crafted in Piet Hein Eek's studio using traditional wood-working techniques. It is produced without a lacquer finish for a full expression of the wood's texture. Each piece is unique, based on the material available at the time.

OLD LAMPSHADELAMP As long as I have known her, my wife Jeannine has been collecting lampshades for some future purpose. Needless to say, we have quite a few stored away. When I visited Leo Coolen (Sprookjes NV), who collaborated with us in our current building, it turned out he too has a collection of lamps, the size of which is absolutely beyond imagination. Collections that are apparently without end yet unique always tend to excite me and I could not stop thinking about all those lamps, not only because this is our first joint project, but also because many more are sure to follow.

AS-THICK-AS-WIDE-CHAIR This chair was created some time ago. The idea was simple: the slats used to make it all have equal width and thickness. The extended spine creates a triangular structure that provides strength. We really liked the chair, but it was not developed further, partly because the cushions were rather expensive to produce and we thought the design would be unsaleable. The cutting machine we purchased for the packaging can also cut fabric, which significantly reduces the upholstery costs. The direct reason for us to start producing the chair was that we wanted to use comfortable luxury chairs from our own workshop in our own restaurant.

AS-THICK-AS-WIDE-TABLE Analogous to the chairs, we have also created a table made of planks that are all as thick as they are wide. The width of the slat for the chair is the thickness of the plank for the table. We actually only have large tables in the collection and we were regularly asked to add a smaller table of solid oak to the collection. When the table and chair were stood next to each other, just before they were put into the bus, we saw that the set is beautiful in its simplicity – for some, more beautiful than expected. Yet simple luxury is still something that sounds good but receives little support from buyers, which is a shame because it is in this field that we can draw upon a rich tradition of unrecognised, simple luxury. Of course we are not complaining as there are also products that are in great demand.
