

PIET HEIN EEK

TUBE EDITION

TUBE EDITION

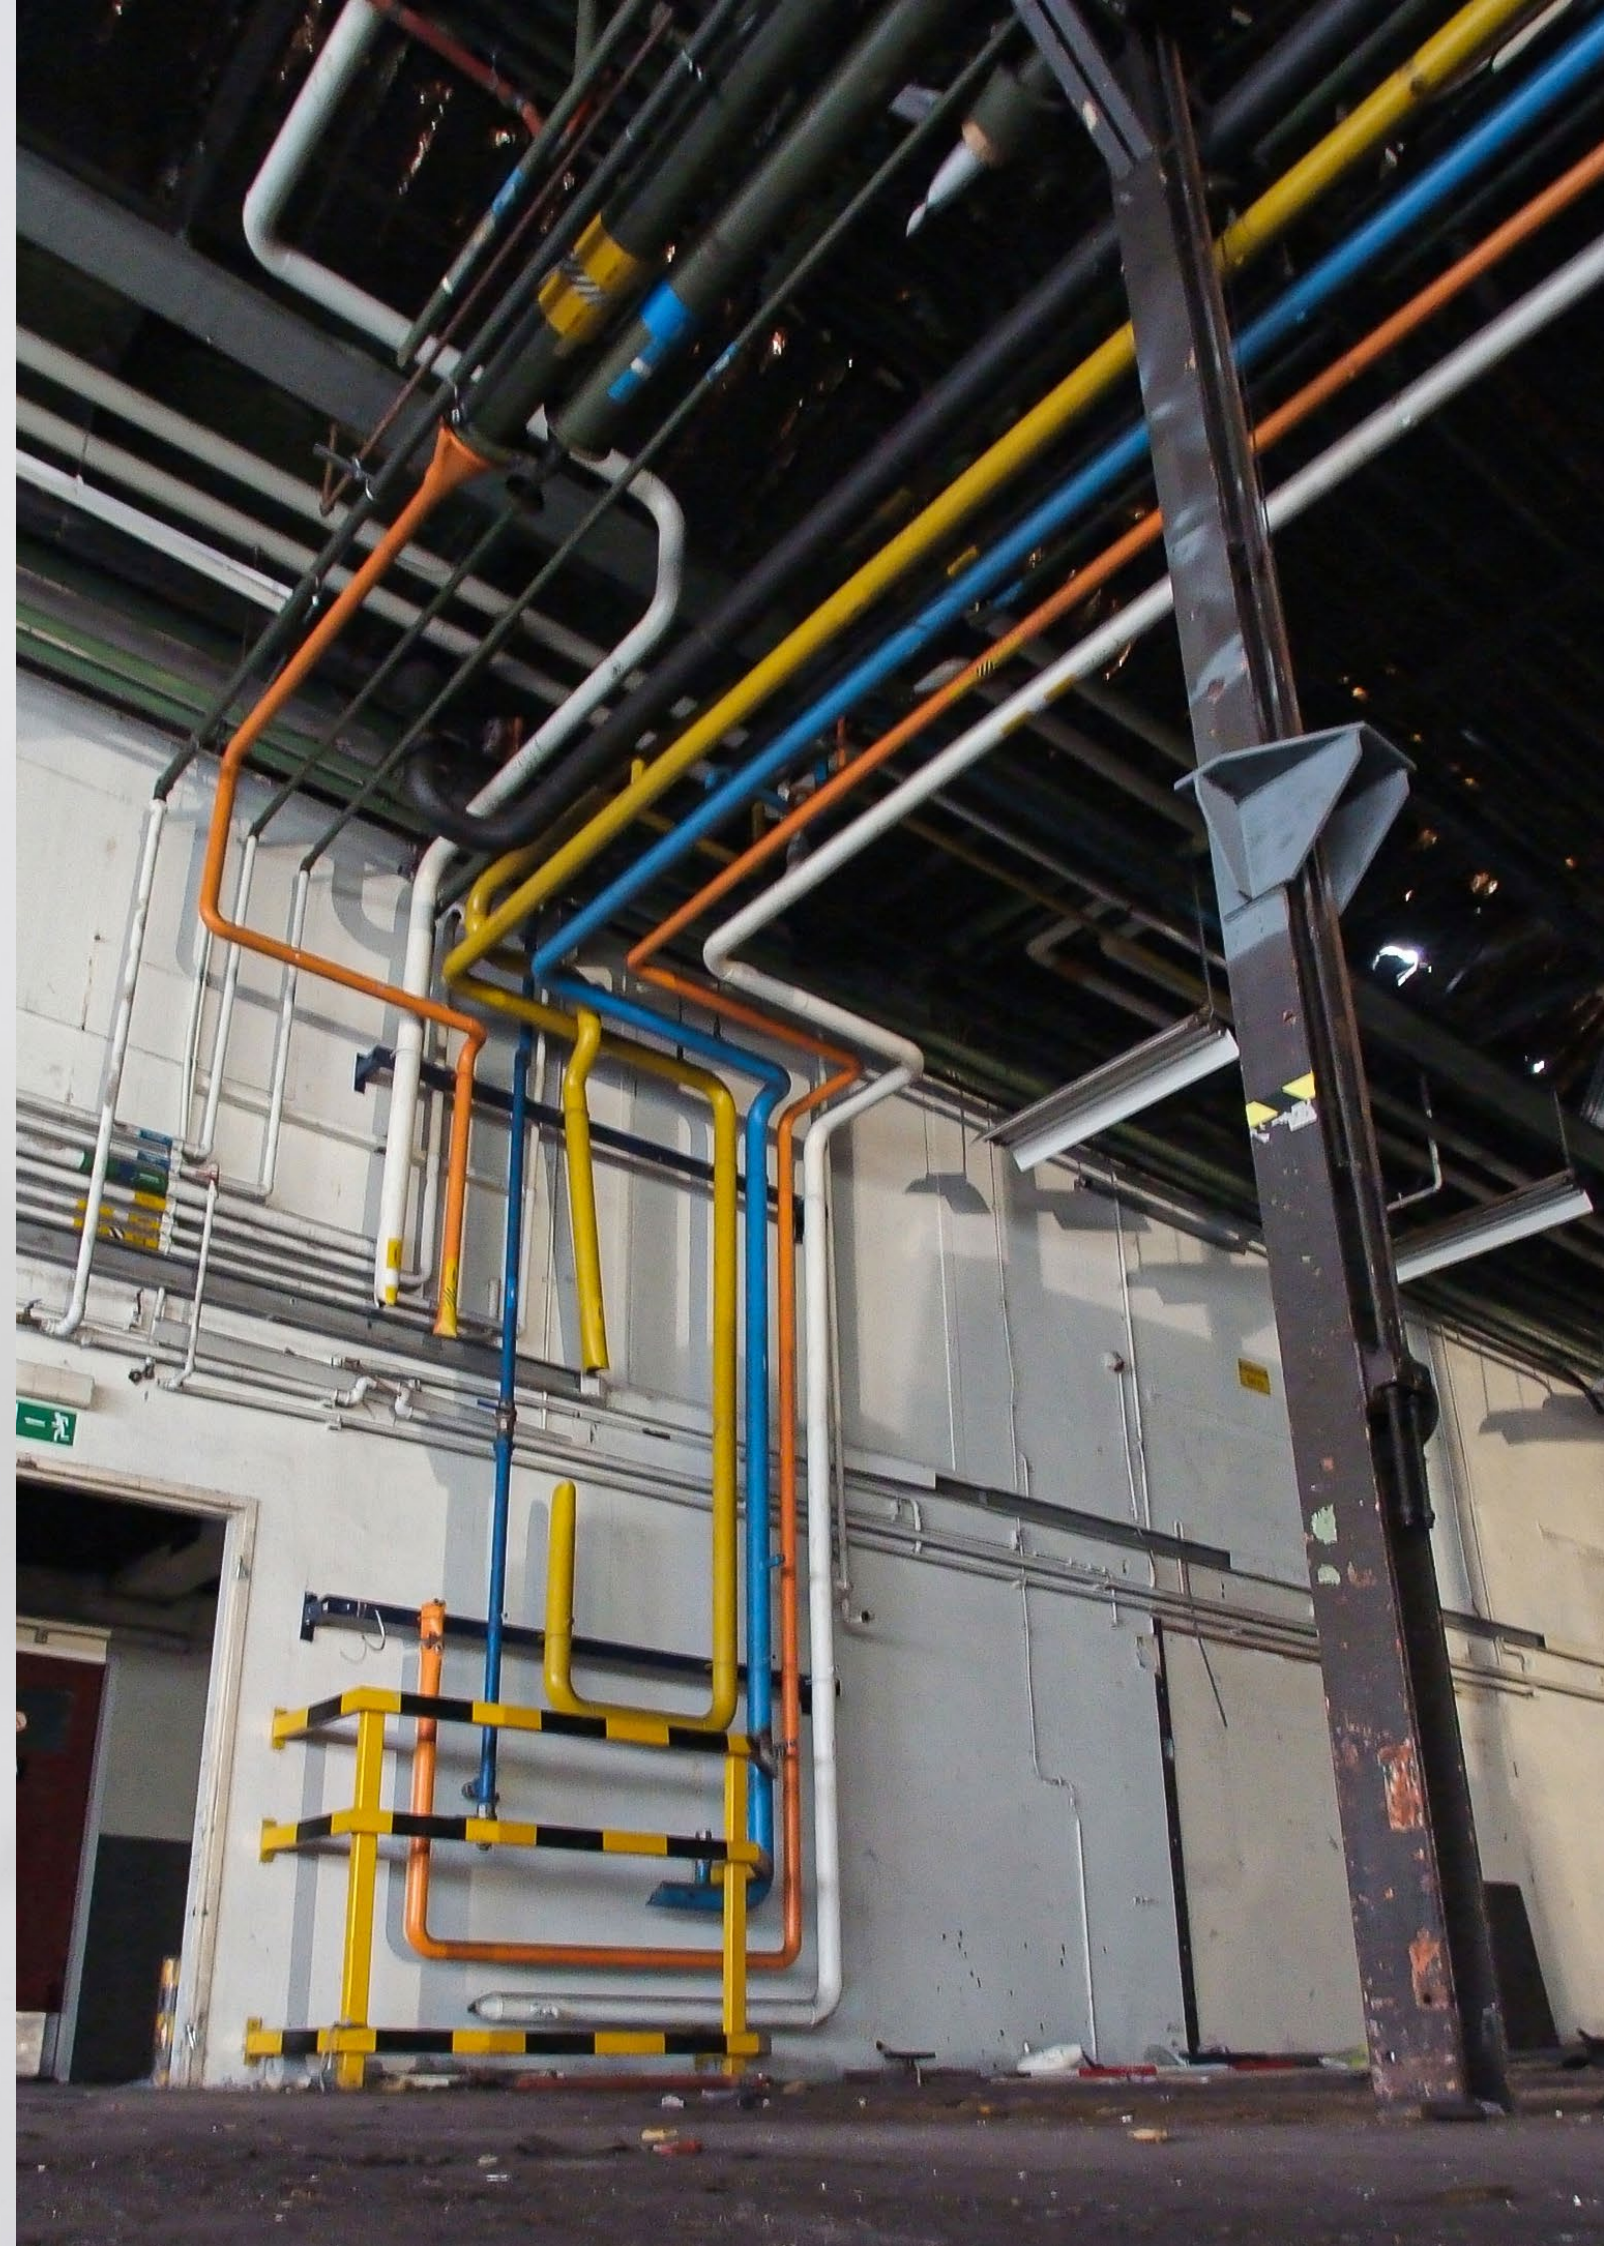

After stacking the enormous beams it was a logical step to start stacking the piping we had in stock. The difference is that pipes roll, therefore we decided to attach them together using nuts and bolts at the ends of each pipe. This turned them into seating objects that could be disassembled. The tubing was fixed together only after each element had been held in place with clamps absolutely right to create a perfect seat.

After the piles of straight pipes we had removed from our building during demolition, and which we had used to make the benches and armchairs, there were also still curved pieces. With these pieces it is possible to construct. We made tables and chairs from them. The tables were finished with old beams table tops, and the chairs were upholstered with fabric taken from the awnings of the Philips buildings that were being demolished around us.
